

I ate two weeks of school cafeteria food, I really want to eat something American. I went to McDonald's with some of my American classmates, I ordered a hamburger, fries, and a cup of orange juice, surprisingly I spent twenty RMB, which is similar to the price in America. In the United States, McDonald's is the most popularized fast food restaurant, it has become a high level enjoyment in China. In fact, Beijing's snacks are very good. I really do not understand why so many Chinese people are willing to pay lots of money to eat America's cheapest things. Many Americans think: it is an unfortunate thing that McDonald's has become a representative of American culture. I do not think this is a bad thing. Chinese people always think their own eating culture is first world, but McDonald's business being so good can explain why American fast food attracts people. If Chinese beef noodles and dumplings were taken to be sold in the US, business would definitely not have the same success as McDonald's in Beijing.
